

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The disclosed embodiments relate to a method of finance forecasting. The method may comprise determining at least one participant characteristic of a participant, defining probability bins each of the probability bins corresponding to a probability associated with an expected outcome, performing a query process with the probability bins as assets, and aggregating a result of the query process with weighting for the participant characteristic.